

Dear RASCEE Readers,

We are pleased to introduce to you a new issue of Religion and Society in Central and Eastern Europe (RASCEE). The current issue includes four articles and four book reviews, covering a wide range of topics related to interconnections between religion and the public space, such as: the conceptualisation of the relationship between religion and power; church–state relations in Croatia and their impact on religious rights and religious freedom; social expectations regarding the role of religion in four Central European countries; and extremist manipulation of apocalyptic fears in Romania. We are thankful to all who have contributed to our activities and to those who helped us in the production of the current issue.

We also are happy to inform you that, beginning in 2012, RASCEE is indexed and abstracted in the Index to the Study of Religions Online (a cross-searchable database and bibliography of journal articles), as well as in EBSCO Publishing–Academic Search Complete, SocIndex with Full Text, and Central and Eastern European Academic Source. Our journal is also being monitored for indexing and abstracting in other academic databases.
